

AN ODD CITY OF THE BIRDS.

A New and Perilous Industry On the Farallon Islands.

EGG GATHERING ON THE CRAGS.

One Hundred and Sixty Thousand Dozen Murres' Eggs for San Francisco.

—Beard Illustrates Wild Scenes.

(Copyright, 1886, for The Times.)

OR three months every year men eggs in the markets of San Francisco have to take a buck seat, giving precedence to the cheaper, larger and handsomer eggs of the California Murres, or guillemot, a seabird related to the auk, which breeds in countless thousands upon the Farallon Islands. A new and singular industry has been developed in the gathering of these eggs for the market by Italian and Greek fishermen, who peril their lives in frail fishing boats and in scaling the rocky islets for the eggs of the murre.

Three clusters of rocky islands of volcanic origin, thirty miles from San Francisco, in the Pacific ocean, form the Farallons, South Farallon being the largest and the only one inhabited. Although of surpassing interest on account of its varied and picturesque scenes and the myriad of birds which there find a summer home, the Farallons are seldom, if ever, visited by the tourists. They are difficult of access, small fishing boats or an occasional out-going boat being the only means of transit.

South Farallon is about a mile in length and half a mile wide, everywhere cut up by jagged broken, precipitous bluffs, crannies and rocky points, the highest, where the light-house is situated, being 300 feet above the sea. The whole island may be said to be a veritable city of the birds, covering their eggs in dense colonies, swimming and diving or wheeling by thousands through the air with shrill, incessant cries. The bird census there never has been taken.

Besides the murre, which lays the marketable eggs, tufted penguins, western gulls, three species of cormorants, Cassin's auklet, the auk petrel and the pigeon guillemot breed in large numbers.

The murre lays one large, pear-shaped egg, having about twice the capacity of a hen's egg. This is curiously and beautifully marked in many shades of red, brown, green, in surprising variation. The eggs sell readily at twenty cents dozen in the markets, and that they are considered valuable as a food supply, is evidenced by the fact that one hundred and sixty thousand dozen are consumed annually.

Each egg of the enormous product the birds seem to lay almost as prolific as ever although near the close of a season's collecting, many "runt" eggs are found.

Two men who were left on Sugar Loaf, an isolated rock 185 feet high, collected one hundred and eight thousand murre's eggs in one season.

The eggs usually consist of twelve to fifteen men who inspect the great rookeries early in the season to see if the birds have laid. When the time is ready to begin work, a cautious but necessary performance takes place. The whole island is gone over and all the murre's eggs within reach are broken or thrown into the sea. This is to insure fresh eggs, for the eggers maintain that an egg that has been sat upon for a day is unfit for market. This is a time of rejoicing for the sea gulls, who love to feed upon the murre's eggs, and are relentless pirates, robbing the poor murs at every opportunity, or the once-hatched young guineas.

Unto the gull, the murre makes no rest whatever, covering its egg on any bare rock that will support it.

If left undisturbed, the murses would lay but one egg each, during a season, but as they are robbed, they continue laying.

The collecting outfit of the eggers is simple. A cotton door sack is put into an "egg shirt" and is buttoned at a hole in the bottom for the head, and on the outside for arm holes; a gathering string about the mouth of the sack permits it to be drawn tightly about the waist, while a slit down the shirt in front makes an opening for stowing sugar loaf, it being warmer there and more protected from prevailing winds. This rock is reached by a boat, which is left in charge of one man, while four or five of his companions scale the dangerous cliffs and collect the eggs about its precipitous sides. Meanwhile the voracious gulls hover over the men, screaming and cackling for a share of the plunder. This is one of the most difficult places for collecting on the island, and ropes are made fast to enable the hardy Greeks to reach the greatest half pirates, trespassing on Uncle Sam's Islands, and the United States authorities have on a number of occasions, forcibly removed them, only to have them return at the first opportunity. One year the eggers secured themselves in the great Mure Cave, while the revenue cutter "Cone" hovered about the island for hours. The men live in caves, or in tents made of old sails and spars, and with a plenteous supply of macaroni and sour

Day or night, in the summer time the Farallons are ever animated; the myriads of birds fly to and fro with wild cries unceasingly, while at night the auklets come forth the squalls of the surf and weird, castle rocks, the gulls hover with quavering cry, especially over the islands in the moonlight like a molten shield of silver.

HENRY REED TAYLOR.

GUARDIAN OF LEE'S TOMB.

"Uncle Tom," His Old Servant, Worships His Memory.

Mr. C. A. Fenneron, of Baltimore, writes to the Sun as follows:

"Having spent two days recently in Lexington, Va., among the hallowed memorials of that ancient town, it then occurred to me how strange it must appear to our Northern brother that the tomb and magnificent recumbent statue of Gen. R. E. Lee should be kept and securely guarded, as it is, by a colored man.

"So, too, is General Lee's office, just as he left it, tables, desks, chairs, table-covers, papers, and letters, and everything else down to his inkstand and manuscript, in personal charge of old Uncle Tom.

"Nor is it an easy task to guard and preserve these venerable relics from the profane and desecrating hand of the relic-hunting vandals.

"Yet with the sharp eye, brave heart and strong arm of the faithful sentinel that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the foibles and shortcomings of the man of mark could have no greater or more perilous exposure than that to the scrutiny of his servant under conditions such as those in which Uncle Tom served his beloved master; 'as he is wont to say, the great general. 'He was a master and a father to me, too,' said Uncle Tom.

"And now let me report to whom it may concern what Uncle Tom imparted to me concerning his relationship with that mighty captain of the valorous Confederate hosts. He began by saying in his dialect that he had enjoyed the proud privilege and distinction of being close to the great general in camp-life for four long years, and that never once, in all that trying time, had he ever heard him utter a cross, impudent or impudent word to man or beast. It seems he admitted that he maintained so long a period as that is indeed, close connection, and who would be a closer observer of the great man's character and daily demeanor than that untutored brother of color? No severer critic is a man likely to have than his own valet, body servant or cook; or, at least, the